Dept. of Energy, Office of Energy Efficiency and Renewable Energy, Geothermal Technologies Program, 1998 OCLC Number: (OCoLC)747952326 Subject: Geothermal resources -- Europe, Eastern. Excerpt: . . . Slovenia Ministry of Economic Affairs Department of Energy Tel: 386 61 178 32 70 Fax: 386 61 133 10 31 The former Yugoslavia consists of the present countries of Slovenia, Croatia, Boznia, Yugoslavia (Serbia and Montenegro) and Macedonia. Now that the strife in this part of the world is lessening, there may be some considerable opportunities in this region for geothermal entrepreneurs. The countries of this region have over 170 natural geothermal outflows with temperatures up to about 80 degrees C. Exploration (including that for hydrocarbons) has discovered reservoirs at readily reachable depths (3 Km or so) reaching temperatures well above 100 deg. C. The promising and proven Pannonian Basin (shared with Romania and Hungary) covers a large portion of the northern part of this area. Substantial efforts to utilize the geothermal resources began in the mid to late 1970 s when much of the world was addressing the energy crisis. Worldwide interest in renewable resources provided momentum for the effort. The countries of the former Yugoslavia may well represent an inviting opportunity for American technology and geothermal entrepreneurs, once political stability returns. Higher enthalpy resources are available, and heat pump technology has already been implemented, but in more rudimentary form than American technology. The situation in this new set of countries deserves watching, from a geothermal standpoint. To date, this is no information on laws or legislation available from the majority of countries of...
