

DOWNLOAD

Productive Men and Reproductive Women: The Agrarian Household and the Emergence of Separate Spheres in the German Enlightenment

By Marion W. Gray

Berghahn Books, Incorporated. Paperback. Book Condition: new. BRAND NEW, Productive Men and Reproductive Women: The Agrarian Household and the Emergence of Separate Spheres in the German Enlightenment, Marion W. Gray, The debate on the origins of modern gender norms continues unabated across the academic disciplines. This book adds an important and hitherto neglected dimension. Focusing on rural life and its values, the author argues that the modern ideal of separate spheres originated in the era of the Enlightenment. Prior to the eighteenth century, cultural norms prescribed active, interdependent economic roles for both women and men. Enlightenment economists transformed these gender paradigms as they postulated a market exchange system directed exclusively by men. By the early nineteenth century, the emerging bourgeois value system affirmed the new civil society and the market place as exclusively male realms. These standards defined women's options largely as marriage and motherhood.

READ ONLINE
[7.47 MB]

Reviews

It is one of the best publications. It really is really intriguing through reading through period of time. You will not feel monotony at anytime of your own time (that's what catalogs are for relating to in the event you request me).

-- Dr. Pat Hegmann

It is one of my favorite publications. It is among the most awesome publication I have gone through. I am just quickly will get a delight of reading through a published publication.

-- Prof. Martin Zboncak DVM